SECRET WEAPONS FOR 6+ PLAYERS (OPTIONAL)

In addition to a mission card, you can distribute a Secret Weapon card to each player at the beginning of the game. Though, don't show anyone! Depending on your given weapon, you can choose to give your Secret Weapon to any player during play or just before the vote. That player must then act accordingly. Only the cards that are exchanged in this way are activated.

CLARIFICATIONS:

Secret weapons cannot be used on yourself.

You can only use them once and those used during the turn are destroyed at the end of each vote.

It's up to you to choose the right moment to give your secret weapon.

You can receive multiple secret weapons, and their effects accumulate.

LITTLE SECRET

This game centers around the secret roles of players. You are either a Good Kitten, Confused Kitten, or a single Spy Pup. All Good Kittens receive the same secret password. Confused Kittens are given a different password. The tricky part... you won't know until the end if you're a Good or Confused Kitten. The Spy Pup is left in the dark with no password at all!

Good Kittens aim to identify and eliminate the Confused Kittens and Spy Pup to win. In contrast, the Confused Kittens and Spy Pup win by staying undetected. Ready to uncover imposters or protect your secret identity in this suspenseful cat-and-dog game?

HOW TO PLAY:

1. PREPARATION

Choose a mission suitable for the number of players, shuffle the cards, distribute one to each player, and place the "Secret Codes" card face down in the middle of the table. The passwords on this card reflect the correct passcodes of the Good Kittens.

2. LET'S PLAY

After looking at your card, one volunteer announces a number between 1 and 21, corresponding to the password for that game. Now, you can tell if you're a Kitten or a Spy Pup. If you see a word next to the number, you're a Kitten, but beware, you don't know if you're a Good or Confused Kitten until the end. If you see an image of a dog in place of a word, you are the Spy Pup. Time to bluff!

SUMMARY OF ROLES:

Good Kittens: All receive the same correct password. Your goal is to unmask the Confused Kittens and the Spy Pup!

Confused Kittens: Receive a password slightly different from the Good Kittens without knowing. Your goal is to pass as Good Kittens.

Spy Pup: Receives no password, just a picture of a dog as an indicator. You must pretend to have a password while trying to guess the Good Kitten's password.

The distribution of roles varies depending on the number of players:

NUMBER OF PLAYERS	4	5	6	7	8
GOOD KITTENS	3	3	4	4	5
CONFUSED KITTENS	1	1	1	2	2
SPY PUP	0	1	1	1	1

A. TAKING TURNS

Starting with the volunteer, you each give a one-word clue related to the word on your card for the chosen number. You must not repeat another player's clue or say your password! It's time to listen carefully to try to discover your role and that of others!

Example:

PASSWORD = PERFUME
GOOD KITTENS

PASSWORD = DEODORANT
CONFUSED KITTEN

NO PASSWORD
SPY PUP

Tip: If you have a password, be careful not to disclose information that is too specific about it. This will prevent the Spy Pup from guessing the password.

B. DEBATE

After all clues are given, discuss who to eliminate (the player suspected to be the Spy Pup or a Confused Kitten). If you are the Spy Pup or think you might be a Confused Kitten, your goal is to fool the Good Kittens.

C. VOTING

Everyone votes simultaneously by pointing at the person they want to eliminate. If you have the most votes against you, you're eliminated, and you must reveal your role!

- If you are the Spy Pup, and you're voted out, you have one last chance to win! Guess the Good Kitten's password by announcing it to the group and check the Secret Codes card to see if you're right. If you are correct, you win and the game is over! If not, the game continues, and you're eliminated!
- If you have a password, and you're voted out, discreetly check the Secret Codes card to discover if you're a Good Kitten (your password matches the Secret Codes card) or a Confused Kitten (your password is different from the Secret Codes). Then, announce your role out loud! Either way, you are eliminated and the game continues!

In case of a tie, you have about ten seconds to defend yourself. After these defenses, everyone, except those who are tied, participates in a new vote. If there is a tie again, you are both eliminated.

D. CONTINUING TURNS

The game continues by keeping the same password from the previous turn. You start with the person to the left of the eliminated player. Everyone who is not eliminated gives a new clue about the same password, followed by a debate, and then someone else is eliminated. Continue this process until all Confused Kittens and the Spy Pup are eliminated, or only two players remain.

3. WINNING THE GAME

- Good Kittens win if you eliminate all of the Confused Kittens and the Spy Pup.
- Confused Kittens win if you remain until the end without being discovered.
- The Spy Pup wins if you are undetected, or if you guess the correct password.

4. KEEP PLAYING

Start over again with a new game! Go back to step 2 and ask a new volunteer to choose a different number between 1 and 21. Continue the fun with your family and friends!

Tip: Change missions from time to time to prevent memorization of the passwords.
